

Teaching Online: Thinking through Distance Learning for Each Student

Strategies and Tools to Support Online Instruction

- In planning for the 2020-2021 school year, distance learning continues to be a potential means for providing instruction to students through fully remote or blended models. Educators and Administrators have been forced to consider ways to provide online instruction to ensure each student is able to access the general education curriculum and receive differentiated and/or individualized supports. Participants will learn about strategies and tools to support online instruction and how to make classroom lessons and activities more meaningful.
